It is ironic that on the Memorial Day week-end and other summer holidays so many Americans die, needlessly, on our highways. Needlessly. Some accidents are not preventable, but certainly most accidents are. They are preventable by you—if you know the correct defensive technique to deal with a given situation.

You've already learned some defensive driving techniques through trial and —perhaps—error. The trouble is that error can be costly. It makes more sense to learn all the defensive techniques you can—in a defensive driving course. One excellent course is the one being offered in all 50 states through the National Safety Council. Here are some of their driving points to remember:

A VEHICLE AHEAD—You can prevent a rear end collision by not following too closely, by watching the traffic as far ahead as possible for signs of slowing or stopping, and by starting to brake soon enough to maintain your stopping distance.

A VEHICLE BEHIND—You should signal your intentions (flashing brake lights or using hand signals) in time for the following driver to react. Slow down to force bumper-crowders to pass you.

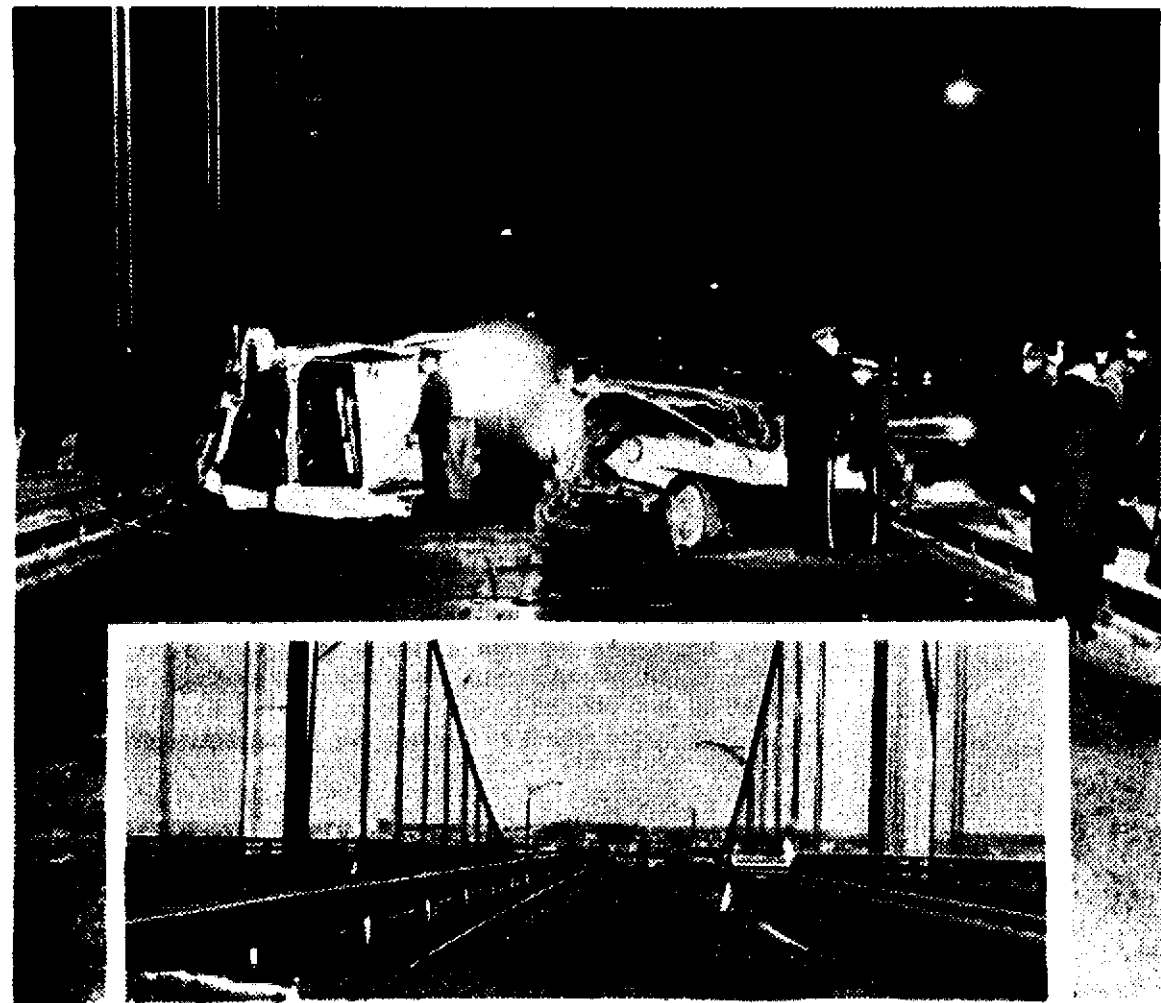

A VEHICLE APPROACHING—You should stay well to the right of the center line, slow down before curves, and turn left only when approaching cars are an ample distance away.

VEHICLE APPROACHING ON CROSS STREET—You should recognize the intersection as highly hazardous. Be extra alert, consider all directions, and never assume the right-of-way.

VEHICLE PASSING YOU—Always check for cars about to pass before you change lanes. Help the passing driver by slowing when necessary.

PASSING ANOTHER VEHICLE—First check behind you, then signal the car you're passing, move out promptly, and return to your lane as soon as you can see the passed vehicle in your mirror.

The Deadliest: HEAD-ON!

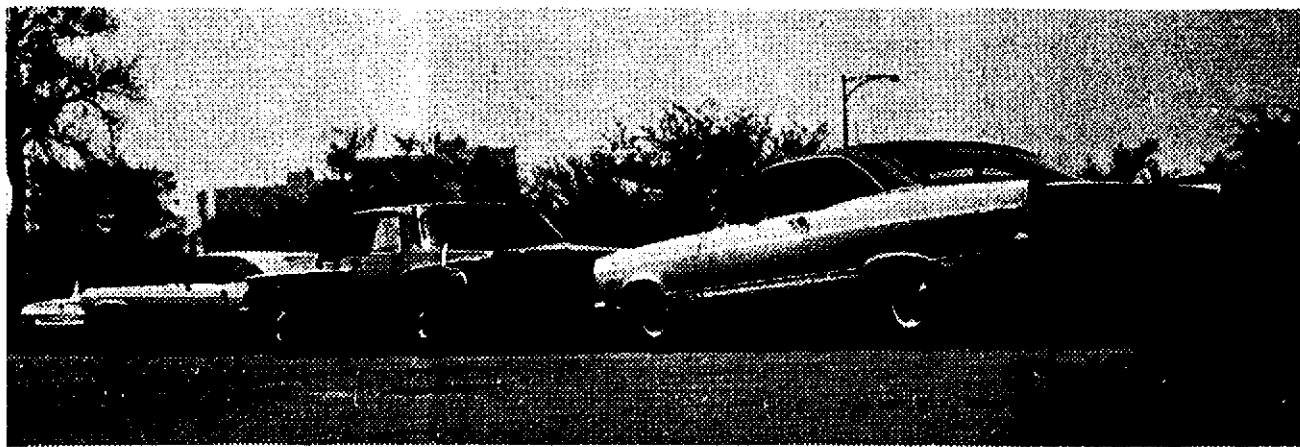

ONCOMING VEHICLE—More than 8,000 deaths are attributed to highway head-on collisions. Typical of this mayhem is the scene above on the busy Paseo Bridge across the Missouri River in North Kansas City where six lives were taken in a grinding nighttime crash. To protect from further head-on crashes on the four-lane bridge roadway, resilient guard rails were installed (inset photo). Even with all the protection possible, it still takes defensive, careful driving to prevent accidents.

SOME COMMON CAUSES AND CURES OF CAR ACCIDENTS

BEING OVERTAKEN—A common example of this is a last-minute decision at an expressway exit. A vital part of trip preparation is a good understanding of the route and intersections. If you miss your exit, accept the necessity to take the next one—even at the cost of extra miles. The cost could be much more expensive in accidents—or even lives.

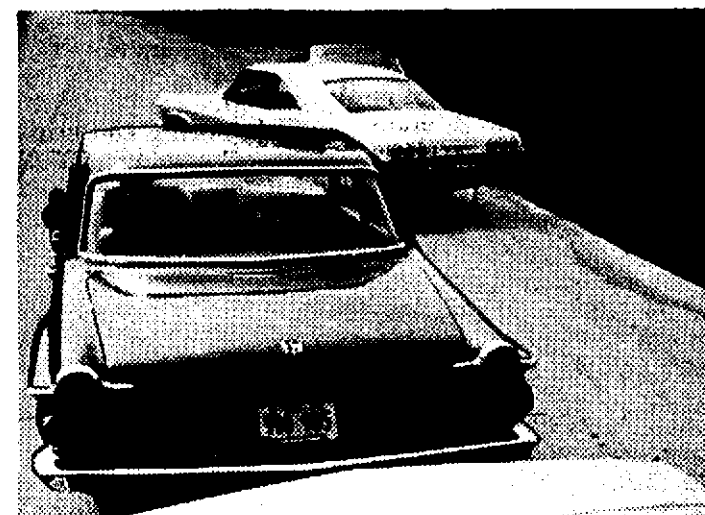

VEHICLE AHEAD—Watch the cars ahead of the car ahead. That's a defensive driving technique that can protect you on the highway. One car pulling from a parking spot can require a panic stop by a driver far back in the line—unless he's aware and prepared.

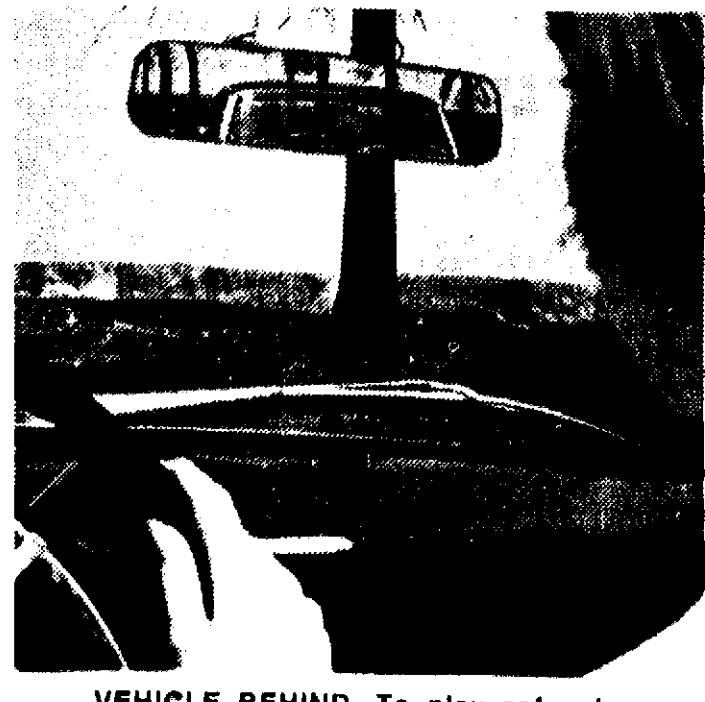

INTERSECTIONS—The right of way isn't yours to take—it's yours to give. Instead of an awkward Alphonse-Gaston act at intersections, you should establish "eye contact" with the other driver, then establish clearly who will go ahead first.

CROSSING THE LINE—Even if this driver doesn't strike the oncoming car, she could force him off the road and into an accident.

OVERTAKING—Don't ride herd on the car in front of you. Keep a healthy distance away from him and you'll keep healthy.

VEHICLE BEHIND—To play safe, do not cut back into lane after passing a car ahead until they can see the full width of the passed car in their rear view mirror.

Take A Can of Cranberry Sauce

Not too long ago, you couldn't get a cranberry... or a cup of cranberry sauce... at this time of year for love or money. Following the fall harvest, the berries went to market "fresh" and were enjoyed only through the holidays. Some cranberry lovers managed to keep the glistening red berries longer by storing them in barrels of cold water, just as they were once stored in whaling ships to guard sailors against scurvy. But, as the cranberry crops grew larger, so did the piles of surplus berries in growers' screenhouses. In 1912, a Maine lawyer-turned-cranberry grower determined to solve the surplus problem by preserving the berries for commercial distribution. His most successful experiment was a canned cranberry sauce that retained the natural flavor and color of the cranberry.

In choosing a name for his new product, the youthful lawyer wanted to select one that would suggest the refreshing flavor and healthfulness of the fruit. Cranberries grow primarily near the sea, and often the pungent ocean mists drift across the bogs... so he chose a name which has since become well-known to most homemakers, Ocean Spray.

A processing plant was set up by the local growers to produce the cranberry sauce for year-round use. Since then, several new cranberry products have appeared on the market, making this succulent little berry a popular addition to the family menu throughout the year.

Today, in addition to the original whole berry cranberry sauce, there is a jellied cranberry sauce with a low calorie version of both to be had. A tangy, colorful cranberry-orange relish is the latest addition to the sauce family.

Because of the tart-sweet flavor and ruby-red color of all of these sauces, they can add that special zip to a meal that turns it from a run-of-the-mill dinner into one of those hate-to-leave-the-table meals. The cranberry sauces not only add a decorative, colorful appearance to a dish but they also give a decided lift to the ordinary taste of a dish. Why not get into an experimental mood and try them in unusual ways!

Now for instance, take a can of cranberry sauce and... this time you tell us!

Water Problem

Population and rainfall maps of Australia, when placed side by side, look identical. Water is a perennial problem on the continent. Australia's well-watered, well-peopled edges surround its arid, empty interior.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bittel

OH, WHAT A TANGLED WEB WE WEAVE...

Dear Helen: I have a girl friend whom I shall call Mary. Each morning Mary walks to my house to get a ride with MY friend, whom I shall call Sandy. Mary isn't very friendly with Sandy, but she wants the ride. Out of appreciation to Sandy, my mother sent her a gift for taking me to school since I don't live in walking distance. When Sandy received her gift she kid-dingly asked Mary where her gift was. Stumped, Mary said she had given me money to put toward the present, which she had not. When my mother heard this she was furious. It's not as if Mary couldn't afford a gift; she comes from a good family.

My second problem is more serious. While Mary is popular with other kids, she monopolizes me. She gets angry if I go anywhere without her. She calls me at least 10 times a day for nothing at all. Is there a polite way to tell Mary to cool it? — PRO-

BLEMED

Dear P: Ask Mary to hand over her half of the present-money, and I think both your problems will be solved, though not very "politely." — H.

Dear Helen: My sister is 17 and going to have an unwed baby. It is just terrible around our house as she bosses me worse than my mother, and treats me cruel. My parents ignore me and pay all the attention to her, like she was a queen or something. If there is an argument, I get blamed, even if she starts it. She wants to keep the baby and my folks are against it, so they're feeling so sorry for her that I get treated like a dog. Is this fair? — P. W.

Dear P: Of course it isn't fair but then, with everyone under a strain, everyone suffers. The family doesn't mean to take out its frustrations and unhappiness on you, but you're sort of the whipping boy because you're the only one not directly involved.

A maternity home for your sister would solve many problems. Most of all, she'd receive expert counseling which might help her adjust to giving up the baby and getting on with her life. — H.

Dear Helen: Is it poor taste to give a girl you like a gift of money when you know she needs it, or would it seem like charity? What if you disguised it like giving her 10 new half-dollars when she graduates from 10th grade? Or should I stick to stuffed animals, candy and things like that? — UNSURE GUY

Dear Guy: Give something practical, but not money... Well, maybe not all that practical either: a girl who needs coins, also needs a few frills in her life. How about the kind of perfume that will make her feel rich? — H.

Dear Helen: Who do you send high school graduation cards to?

Just close friends and relatives? — Yes, Don't overdo the announcement bit. — H. Should one be sent to your boyfriend's parents if you've dated him a lot and you're good friends? — Yes. — H. Should your folks get your boyfriend a gift, whether he sends them an announcement or not? — It would be thoughtful — but he, too, should be thoughtful and send them a card. — H.

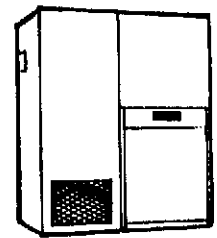

PERSONAL TO "OUTCAST TEENAGER": When you label your contemporaries "a stinking group of primitives who dare call themselves people," you can't exactly expect a brass band! — H.

BE PARTNERS WITH GOD SUPPORT HIS CHURCH

"I OWN

... as far as you can see," boasted one man to the other. But the other man, obviously not too impressed, simply pointed Heavenward and said — "Bob — how much do you own up that way?" What a point he made, what a challenge! For when the final bell rings it won't make much difference how much earthly real estate one owns. A good church attendance record will serve much better. All we have or hope to have belongs to God. So, why not readjust your living habits? Form a pay-as-you-go corporation with God and try to get a deed to a little corner of heaven. The Lord gives a guaranteed title to every worthy person.

You In The Church

The Church In You — form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.

Ministers of all faiths and the community-minded firms below persuade you to read this Spiritual Values page and make it a part of your life ... it is your heritage.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS
Most people would suffer from lack of oxygen at an altitude of 10,000 feet. Peruvian Indians often live at altitudes up to 17,000 feet, says The World Almanac. They are able to live at such heights because their lungs are larger than normal, they inhale more air with each breath, they have about two quarts more blood than most people and their hearts are about 20 per cent bigger than those of lowlanders.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH
If You Wear a Lower Partial Denture . . .
By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Metal bars of lower partial dentures have a nasty way of settling into the soft tissues behind lower front teeth. Settling or sinking occurs slowly, sometimes taking years before the bar really digs into the gums. Pressure so produced may be intense enough to cut the gums, "break down" bony support of front teeth and, in some cases, loosen these teeth and push them forward. This does not occur without pain, but many patients keep putting off the inevitable dental visit, hoping it won't be necessary.

But it's not one of those conditions that will disappear if you just don't look. Something must be done about it. While a new denture may turn out to be the only satisfactory solution, there are simpler remedies that can be tried first.

What are these remedies?

1. Grinding away that part of the bar that digs into the gums. Sometimes enough can be ground away to give complete relief. But it must be done without so weakening the bar that it might break or become flexible. Thin bars create pressure (torque) on natural teeth that support dentures. Important: Whenever a denture is adjusted for relief of "sore spot" or any other reason, that area must be polished. Rough dentures can cause chronic irritation.

2. Back sections of the denture can be built up by re-basing. This tends to raise the bar, also. Re-basing can be done with quick-setting plastic and this technique has the advantage of allowing all the work to be done in one visit.

3. Re-basing by more conventional means requires new impressions and laboratory procedures that take at least 24 hours and add to the expense. Important: After re-basing, the "bite" must be adjusted to allow for added height.

4. A new denture, with new metal casting, is often the best remedy, even though the most expensive one.

Please send your questions about dental health to Dr. Lawrence in care of this paper. While he cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in this column.

Sprinter Smith

SAN JOSE, Calif.—(NEA)—Jim Grelle blinked, shrugged his shoulders and told Tommie Smith, "Sure, you can interview me. But about what?"

Gerry Lindgren was getting ready to race against Ron Clarke when Tommie Smith, tape recorder in hand, approached him. "What?" stammered Lindgren, figuring someone must be playing a practical joke. "An interview?"

"Yep," replied Tommie Smith, "for a report I'm working on."

"O.K.," Lindgren replied, a puzzled look on his face, and off they went.

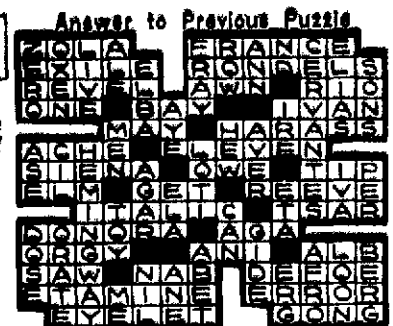

San Jose State's Tommie Smith, the world's best sprinter, was writing a paper for a physical education course titled: "The Physiological and Psychological Advantages and Disadvantages of Distance Running."

As for Tommie, the world-record holder in every 200-meter and 200-yard dash event, the coming year promises to be even better than last season.

"I'm taking it easier," he said. "No more four events in one meet. We have a 25-foot long jumper now, so I don't have to worry about competing there."

Distance running always has fascinated Tommie. "I've watched a lot of races from trackside," Tommie said, "and I could see the pain and agony in their faces."

"I admire distance runners. My workouts are hard but theirs are fantastic. They work so hard and so long to achieve a goal.

"Distance runners are examples of athletes having the will to do something. If you can understand the sacrifices and work of distance men, you can better understand the competitive mind of an athlete."

Farm Tractor Anniversary

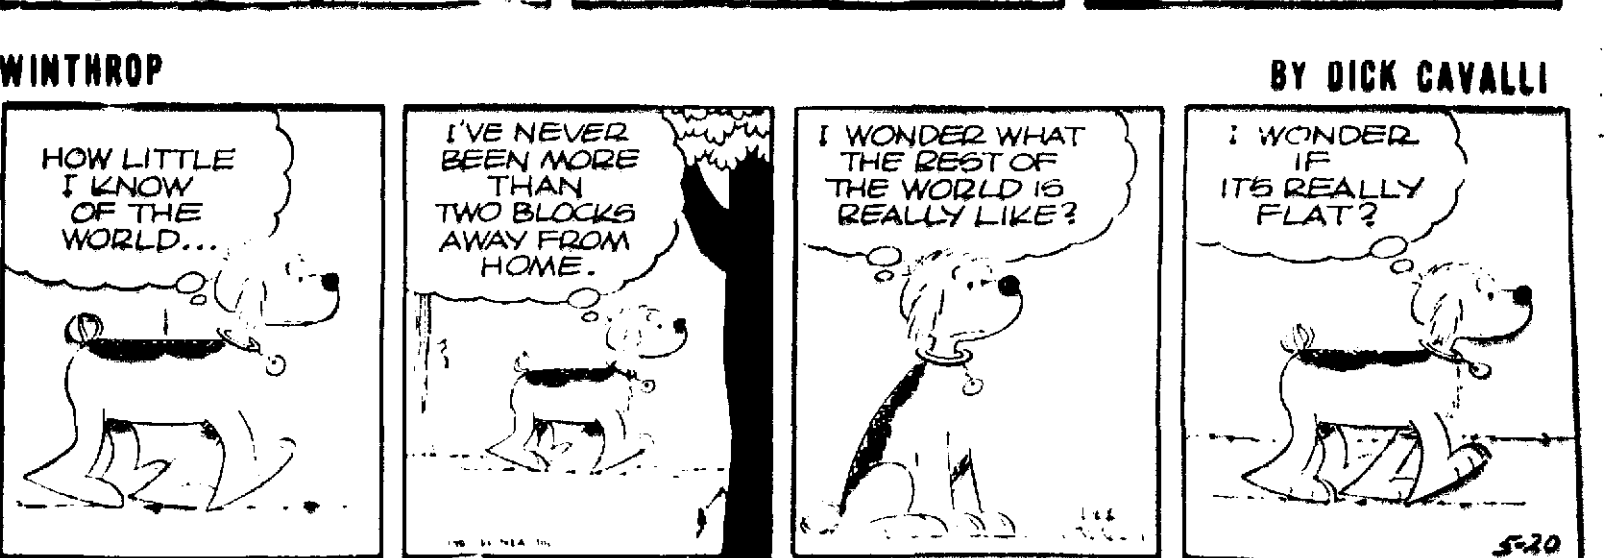

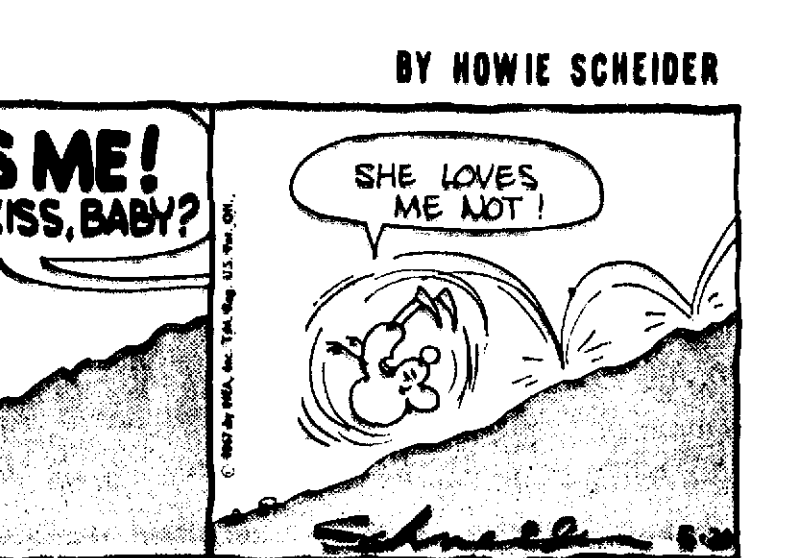

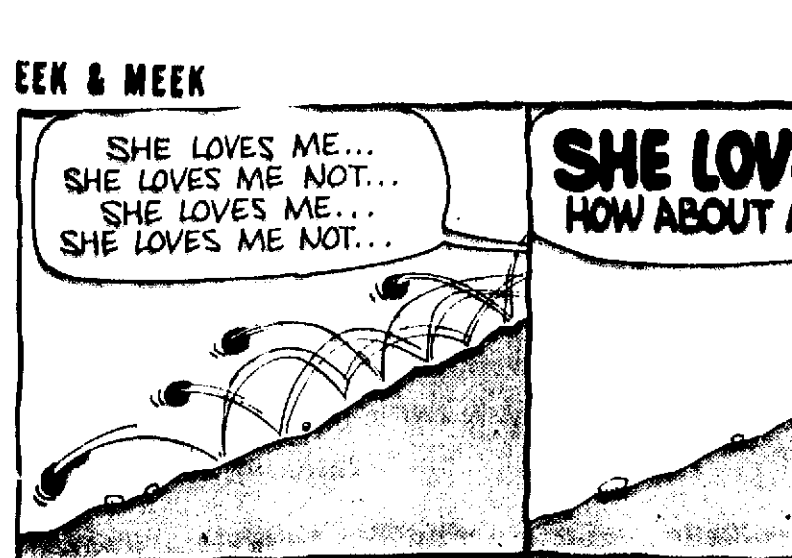

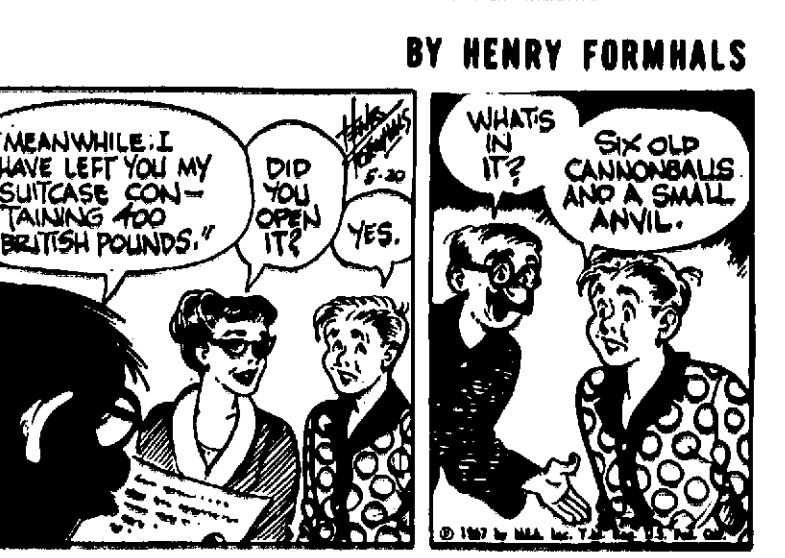

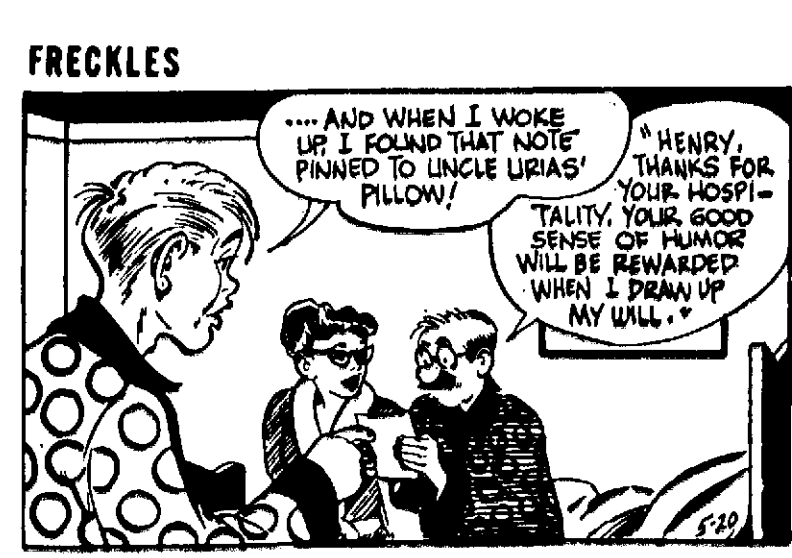

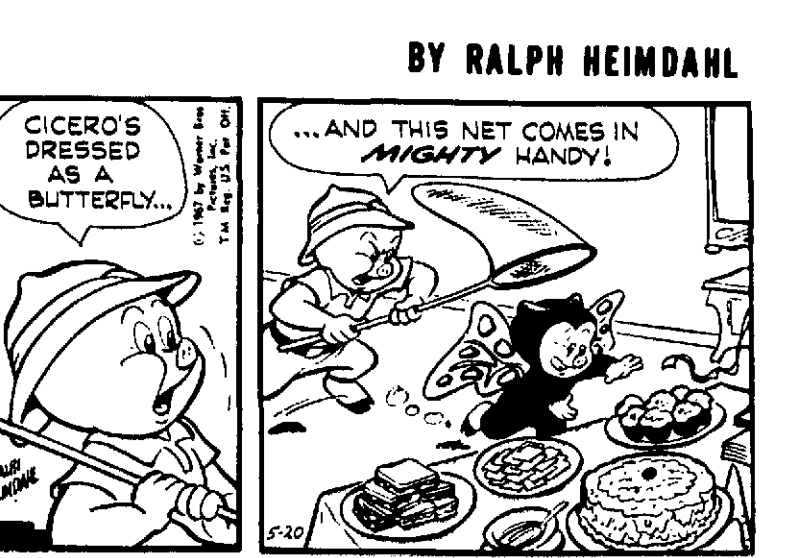

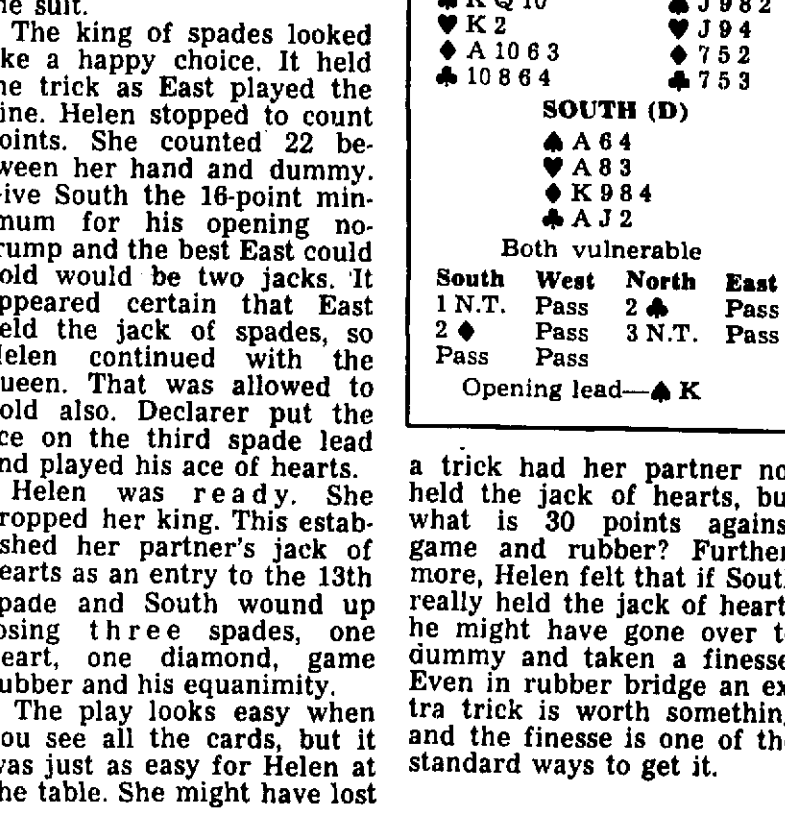

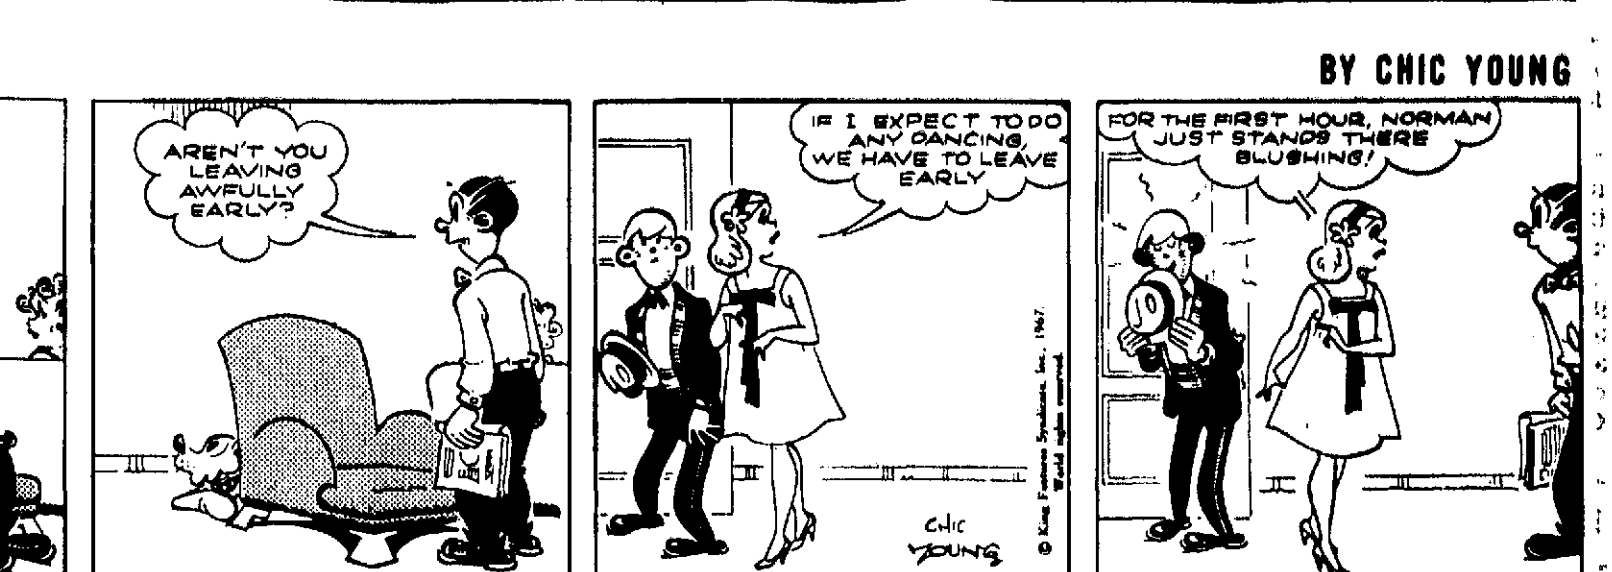

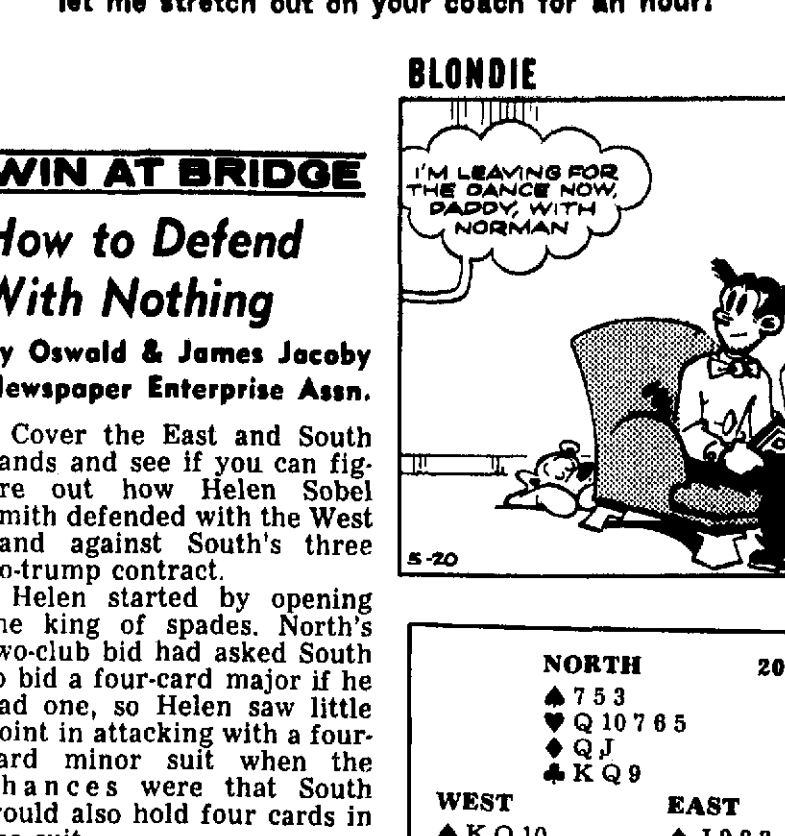

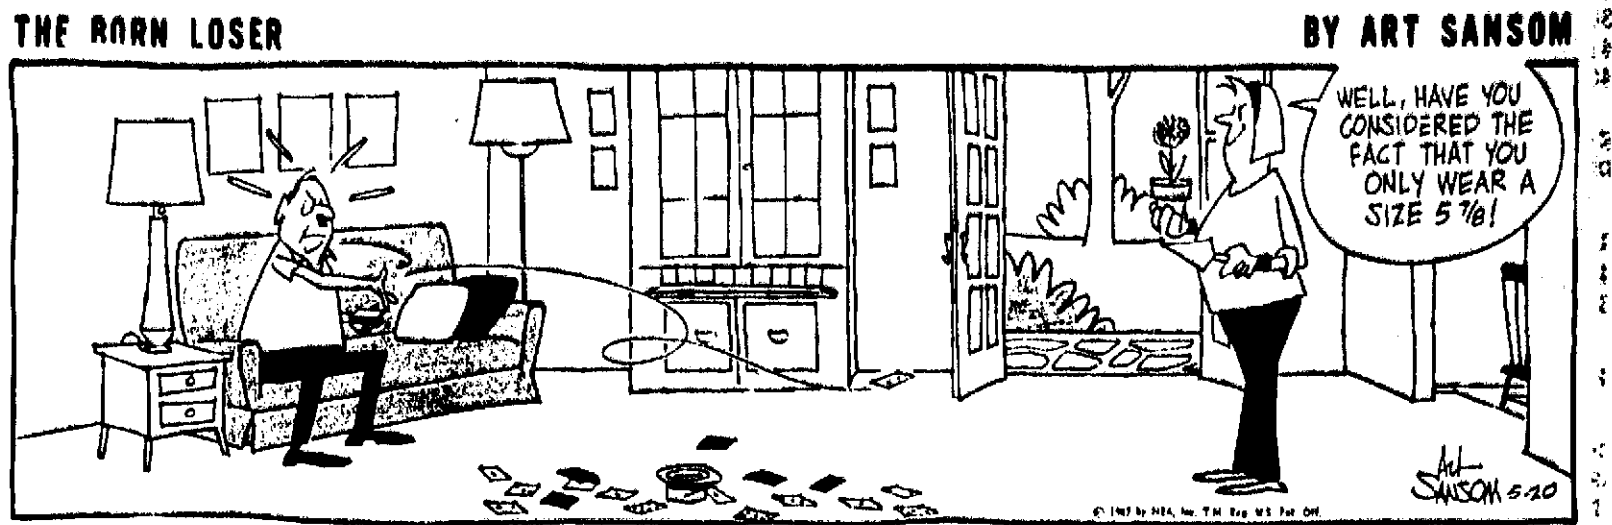

Fifty years ago the sweat of animals and men was responsible for putting in the world's food crops, until tractors eased the burden. The breakthrough came with Henry Ford's mass-produced Fordson, above right, in 1917, which was compact and relatively inexpensive. The span of 50 years is shown between it and the company's latest model pictured above center.

The search for additional comfort brought this completely enclosed model by Cockshutt in 1956. Cabs for any make of tractor are now mostly manufactured independently.

First successful crawler tractor was built by Benjamin Holt Co. of Stockton, Calif., in 1904. It could pull 10 bottoms of moldboard plow, but was huge, expensive and took two men to run it.

Barber Shoots 71 in First; Sikes a 79

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Miller Barber of Texarkana shot a first round score of 36-35-71 in the $115,000 Colonial National Invitational Golf Tournament here Thursday.

R. H. Sikes of Springdale shot a 40-39-79 on the 7,132-yard, par 70 course, which probably put him far out of reach of leader Dave Stockton, who equaled the course record with a 33-32-65.

Outdoor Notebook

LONDON — (NEA) — The Hon. Robin Sinclair, J.P., D.L., the Laird of Lochduh, and owner of 60,000 acres of prime grouse and stag moors in northern Scotland, curled his fingers around a tumbler of Scotch whisky and leaned back in the soft chair.

It was nearly 2 a.m. We were sleepy but unwilling to interrupt a discussion of Scottish sport. Robin smiled his wide, friendly smile and his great shaggy eyebrows arched. He owns the fishing rights to the entire River Thurso, from source to sea. (When Arnold Gingrich—well-known fisherman and publisher—was informed of this, he exclaimed "My God!")

That's like saying he owns the entire Western Hemisphere!"

He described the river, cold and swift, churning through the highlands toward the Atlantic ("On clear days, we can see the Orkneys."). He told how he—and his father before him—had improved the river in places, increasing the number of fishing "beats."

In addition, he said, he operates one of the largest salmon hatcheries in the world, supplying many clients in Europe with eggs and fry.

Salmon fishing is no casual subject with Robin Sinclair.

"I suppose you're wondering about tackle," he said.

His entranced audience agreed.

"I think you'd be most surprised by the size of the rods," Robin said. "The average is about 14 foot," he continued, "and many go longer."

He waited for the reaction, which came slowly at that hour, but it came surely. Fourteen feet! And here was an audience of Americans to whom handling a nine-foot fly rod was like tossing the caber (small tree trunk).

"Actually," Robin laughed, "I just bought my son a small rod—a light one for a lad. Only 12 foot."

You conjured a picture and it was like a turn-of-the-century etching of a man in a suit and top hat manhandling a small tree for a rod.

But the size of the rod was irrelevant. What really mattered, what your mind really focused on, was the fish at the other end: a brawny Atlantic salmon. You could see the leader cut through the water like a thin scythe. You could feel the rod butt shudder against your belly and you could hear the ban-shnee screech of the reel. You could hear it and feel it and almost smell the spices of a clean river.

Fran's Dedication Costly

Francis Tarkenton has already seen what a difference being a New York Giant means. Now he can walk into a big restaurant and be recognized and get a good table. Elaine Tarkenton's also impressed by the difference. "She thinks of all that good Fifth Avenue shopping and Broadway shows," says Tarkenton, who huddled recently with coach Al Sherman for four days. "I've given her a $5 allowance at Saks."

But here's how dedicated Tarkenton is to football. He set a June 18 cutoff date on all outside engagements to devote a full month to getting himself in shape for training camp. He then received an offer of $1,500 to speak at an insurance company convention in Yosemite Park on June 21, with expenses paid for himself and Elaine. He turned it down.

Mayo Smith, who has the Detroit Tigers off and winging in the American League, didn't kid himself about the future when he returned to managing this year. "Only two men," he said, "ever beat the racket. Mr. (Connie) Mack and Mr. (Clark) Griffith. And the only way they managed it was by owning the ball club."

As a manager, Dave Bristol's biggest problem is when the Cincinnati Reds go to Atlanta. Then all his relatives descend from the hills of western North Carolina for tickets to the ball game.

The play that convinced Bristol his young 18-year-old sensation, Gary Nolan, had the poise to stay in the majors came in a game the kid didn't win.

Nolan had the Los Angeles Dodgers shut out, 1-0, with two out in the ninth inning when Jim Hickman's pinch double drove in the tying run. "Another kid might be kicking the dirt," notes Bristol, "but this boy backed up home plate the way he was supposed to, and then he went out on the mound again and struck out Dick Schofield on three pitches."

Tom Seaver, another young pitcher who has been impressive (for the New York Mets), claims a unique distinction. He once pitched a game that started at 11 p.m. and ended in broad daylight. Of course, the game commenced in broad daylight, too, since it was up in Alaska during a summer vacation from Southern California, on the one day a year the sun doesn't set.

Roger Rouse, angling for a light-heavyweight championship bout, was an all-state high school football player in Montana who enrolled at the state university on a grid scholarship. But in the spring, when he was supposed to turn out for his first shot at the varsity, Roger skipped the practice sessions to fight in Golden Gloves and lost his free ride. So he switched to Idaho State on a boxing scholarship.

Looks very much like George Mikan, Mr. Basketball, has made a full grab of power in his new job as commissioner of the American Basketball League. He squeezed the founders out of the picture. But it looks like there might not be much to grab, since the ABL is having big trouble getting off the ground in several cities.

That stock car racing business is a wee bit different than ordinary highway driving. For instance, those souped up "stocks" driven by Richard Petty and buddies only go about 80 miles on 20 gallons of gasoline. Besides making his motion picture debut, Paul Hornung is also angling to wind up a sports telecaster a la good buddy Frank Gifford.

Maybe Johnny Nerud, the trainer of Dr. Fager, doesn't want his colt in the prestige events like the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, but the horse's owners weren't happy about the pull-outs.

Between you'n' me, other pro golfers might drum Frank Beard out of the union when they find out he really wrote his own instructional series, Shaving Strokes, for NEA, and in longhand yet . . . instead of using the traditional ghost.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—If there is an art to driving in runs, Deron Johnson of the Cincinnati Reds never studied it.

"All you need," he says blandly, "is two guys ahead of you who get 200 hits apiece each year."

Johnson has Vada Pinson and Pete Rose batting ahead of him. It makes life with the Reds very profitable.

Deron's income depends on runs batted in more than base hits.

"With Pinson and Rose batting ahead of me, I know I'll have at least two opportunities each game for an RBI," Johnson said. "I also know I have so many at bats each year. The averages take care of the rest."

It's not quite that easy. In 1965, Deron led the National League with 130 RBIs. Last year, despite a shoulder injury which hampered his production during the first half of the season, he knocked across 81 runs.

This year could be a repeat of 1965 because the 27-year-old outfielder-infielder is rid of his shoulder trouble and is swinging freely again.

"I'm a funny hitter," he said. "I need more work than the average guy. A couple of rainouts and a couple of days without batting practice and I lose my timing. Then I have to take extra practice to get it back."

"Batting behind Pinson and Rose make it easier on me. I concentrate more with men on base than when they're not."

"When someone is on, I'm just trying for a base hit. When no one is on, that's when I'm looking for the home run."

He is also proficient in that department. In three full major league seasons he has hit 21, 32 and 24 home runs. In the first month this year, he had seven.

Luckily for Johnson, he has had Pinson and Rose ahead of him during most of his career. "And," he added, "I've never played for a team that wasn't in contention. It might be harder for an RBI man on a team with nothing to shoot for. It would have to hurt your concentration. Salary is the main incentive in that case, I guess."

It's the main incentive everywhere. Only in Cincinnati you don't have to worry as much.

"People ask about pressure on the big hitters," Deron said. "Well, I'd rather bat fourth than be a pinch hitter. That's a tough job."

No matter who's on base.

During 1966, the United States imported a total of 22,055,000 bags of green coffee.

I'm Still the Umpire

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Beans Reardon sat attentively in Gussie Busch's office while the owner of the St. Louis Cardinals described how he wanted him to tour the country making speeches about baseball.

"Now listen, Beans," Busch said. "Go home and talk it over with your wife. Maybe she won't want you running around the country like that at your age."

"What do you mean, my age?" shorted Reardon, who is 69. "I don't have to go home and tell her anything. I'm still the umpire."

Still the umpire and always the umpire. Even now, when Beans is sitting in a chair in an office, his raspy, Massachusetts-accented voice carries from room to room. Just like the old days when the stadia didn't have public address systems and the umpires had to announce the batteries before the games.

Beans is working for August Busch now. "I drank enough of his beer," he says, laughing.

Beans Reardon was a National League umpire from 1926 to 1949. He gave the ballplayers the same treatment they gave him. "I'd rather call a player a name than chase him," Beans said. "They understood."

With one exception. "A college kid," Beans said. "One day I called him something when he beefed about a strike."

"So he goes to Ford Frick's office and says, 'Mr. Frick, a ballplayer gets fined $50 for swearing at an umpire, right?'"

"Frick says, 'That's right. Did Reardon curse at you?' The player answers yes and Frick says, 'Well, don't be mad. Consider it a compliment. That's like having anyone else say hello to you.'"

Beans was involved in a number of baseball's more memorable calls. "Like the time Babe Herman, Chick Fewster and Dazzy Vance all wound up on third base."

"All I did was go around saying, 'you're out, you're out!' You never saw three more dumbfounded guys in all your life."

And the time Hack Wilson threw his bat in the Polo Grounds after a called third strike and Beans said, "If it hits the ground, you're out."

Of all the managers, Beans remembers Frankie Frisch and Leo Durocher the best. "They'd both stomp, scream and carry on," Beans said, "but Frankie would forget after a game. Leo wouldn't."

BEANS REARDON

One of the memorable incidents in Beans' career involved Frisch:

"I never tried to figure out a sign in my life. But on this particular day we got a letter from the league office telling us to make sure the third base coach stays in the coaching box."

"Well, we're in Pittsburgh and I'm at third where Frisch is coaching. Now this was during the time when the team left their gloves on the field between innings."

"St. Louis is batting now and I see Frisch out of the coaching box, almost on top of third base. So I remember the league rule and I start yelling at him to get back in the coaching box."

"He says, 'I can't Beans, I just can't.'"

"What do you mean, you can't?" I said. Then he calls time and walks over to me and says, 'My bunt sign is when I stand even with the third baseman's glove.'"

"Well, Frankie," I said, "wouldn't it be logical for you to pick up the glove and move it back?" He looked at me like I just explained him Einstein's theory of relativity."

John (Beans) Reardon was born in Boston and then moved to Los Angeles. He always was too small to play baseball so the bigger kids allowed him to umpire.

"When I was just starting," Beans said, "the Cubs came into Los Angeles for an exhibition game with the Pacific Coast League team. I wound up umpiring."

"Grover Cleveland Alexander was pitching for Chicago and I'm really scared because here's this great pitcher on the mound and this 135-pound squirt behind the catcher."

"Well, the first batter comes up and I call the first two pitches balls."

"Big Pete comes walking off the mound and I figure here's trouble. But he says, 'Young man, what was wrong with those pitches?'"

"All I could say was, 'Nothing. I just missed them.'"

"Alexander looks at me and says, 'That's O.K., son. I'll get the next one over.'"

Those two pitches—says Beans Reardon—were the only two he ever missed.

The Astro Revolution?

NEW YORK—(NEA)—This is the age of the Dodge Rebellion, the Pepsi Generation and, now, the Astrofurf Revolution.

At least that's what the people at Monsanto Chemical, manufacturers of Astrofurf, say.

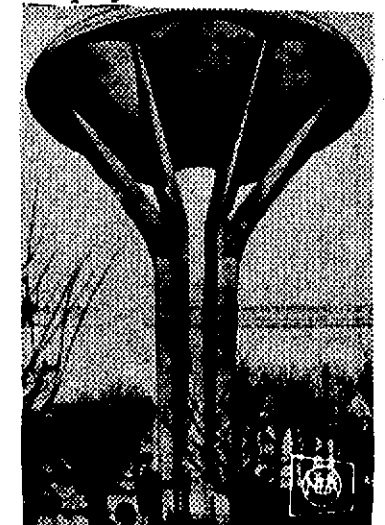

As proof, they cite the first outdoor Astrofurf football fields which will go into use this fall at Indiana State University in Terre Haute and at Seattle's Memorial High School Stadium.

The Seattle field will serve 16 high school teams with eight or more games a week in one of the country's rainiest areas.

As additional proof of the swing to Astrofurf, the firm points out the $25,000 Los Angeles Professional Tennis Tournament at the Los Angeles Tennis Club will be played on Astrofurf courts.

In golf, permanent greens for pitch and putt use will be available for individual and club use by next year.

The Astrodome in Houston has an Astrofurf surface for the Houston Astros baseball games and University of Houston football games. The Houston soccer team also will play there.

WHO SAYS public utilities must be drab and stereotyped? This impressive sight just outside Lyon, France, is no monument but a giant water tower with a 120-foot pillar supporting a basin 100 feet in diameter.

A LITTLE COAXING helps sometime and Jo Ann Prentice applies a bit of body English on the putting green. It didn't help, though. The putt missed and Jo Ann settled for a par instead of a birdie.

Consolation For Poor Students

Good grades in college are desirable, but do not supply a reliable index to success in later life. This hypothesis, which sustained many of us in our collegiate days, has now been confirmed by solemn educational research.

Edward J. Shoben, Jr., director of the Commission on Academic Affairs of the American Council on Education, reported to a recent conference at the University of Maryland that analysis of 50 independent studies showed no correlation between college grades and post-collegiate success.

Grade-getting, Shoben pointed out, is a special skill consisting largely of "learning" to get along with the system. But the academic system is not duplicated outside of the campus. Off-campus success is more likely to go to the shrewd, the daring, the prudent, the lucky and the guy who marries the boss' daughter. — Huntington (W. Va.) Herald-Dispatch

Work Is Taxing

The following figures from the Tax Foundation may be of some interest to those who work for a living:

The fellow (or gal) who works eight hours a day, spends one hour 26 minutes earning money for housing and household operations; one hour, 14 minutes for food and tobacco; 40 minutes for transportation; 30 minutes for clothing; 18 minutes for recreation; 21 minutes for medical expenses; one hour, six minutes for "all other" expenses except for just one. — For taxes the worker puts in two hours, 25 minutes. — Greenville (S.C.) A Final Roll Call

Turning out the lights and locking the doors at the World Journal Tribune in New York was symbolic of the death of not one but a whole catalog of newspapers. It was final, inglorious, anticlimactic chapter in the slow, agonizing death of some of the nation's greatest journalistic mastheads.

Dead is the World, Gone is the Sun, Faded forever are the Journal-American, the Herald and the Tribune. The "Telly", which often served as nickname for the World-Telegram and Sun, was inappropriately applied to the last of the newspapers into which all the others were rolled. And now there is neither "Telly" nor World Journal Tribune.

They had marched head-high at the front of the parade for many years. The harsh realities of contemporary economics and the resistance of printing craft unions to mechanical modernization left them sick. Mere shadows of the past, they have sunk into sleep.

Thankfully for the future of American Journalism, not all cities chew up newspapers as New York does. The economic problems are evenly spread, but luckily many publishers are permitted to solve them by modernizing plants and the techniques of news gathering and printing. — Memphis (Tenn.) Prison Money System Has Been Changed

TUCKER PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP) — A new monetary system designed to curtail gambling and eliminate the buying and selling of favors will be initiated here next week, Assistant State Prison Supt. Thomas O. Murton said Thursday.

Under the new system, inmates will be required to turn in any free world money they receive to the prison office, then sign withdrawal slips at the commissary, Murton said.

The inmates now exchange their free world money for scrip, called "brozene," which they used to buy goods at the commissary.

Murton said the new system also would help put an end to the power structure developed by the inmates with the aid of brozene.

Eisenhower Is Leaving the Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Durable Dwight D. Eisenhower—an old hand at snapping back from illnesses—is ready for hospital discharge, apparently fully recovered from his latest encounter.

The former president, who is scheduled to leave Walter Reed Army Hospital today, will meet with reporters before heading back to his Gettysburg, Pa., farm home.

He has been hospitalized since May 6 for a gastrointestinal ailment his doctors provisionally diagnosed as uncomplicated acute gastroenteritis.

This is a pesky, but usually not dangerous, inflammation of the lining of the stomach and small intestine. It can be caused by such things as the still elusive virus of so-called intestinal flu.

Army medics have said nothing showed up later to alter their initial diagnosis.

Eisenhower has had five major illnesses since 1955 including two major heart attacks, a minor cerebral stroke and two major surgical operations—one for regional ileitis, a serious inflammation of the small intestine, the other for removal of a diseased gall bladder.

In his current illness, while apparently in real discomfort and pain at the start, the general made steady progress towards recovery, according to medical bulletins.

He graduated steadily from no liquid or solid food by mouth for the first 24 hours or so—a normal prescription in such cases—to some light liquid nourishment by mouth, and later to solid foods. There was some intravenous feeding during the early stages—also a normal procedure.

Apparently Eisenhower, 76, might have checked out of the hospital sooner except that his doctors decided to use the occasion for his annual complete physical examination.

Prisoner No. 11 Makes His Escape

Little Rock — Luther Priest, 21, escaped from Tucker Prison on Farm Friday, the 11th to escape the farm since Sunday. He was captured near England about 45 minutes after his escape and returned to Tucker.

Since January 1, 27 prisoners have escaped from Tucker farm. Nine are still at large.

Thomas O. Murton, Tucker warden and assistant state penitentiary superintendent admitted that some of his charges, mainly the reduction of special privileges for trusty prisoners, may have caused some of the escapes.

A number of prisoners admitted privately Friday that the ban on punishment by Murton, especially the use of the strap, had made the prospect of escape less frightening.

TUCKER PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP)—Six Tucker Prison Farm inmates, traveling in threes, escaped within hours of each other here Thursday.

The escapees, three of whom were armed, brought to 10 the number who have fled Arkansas prisons since Sunday. State Police have captured only one.

A Tucker Prison Farm spokesman said Jackie Lee Woods, 22 of Springdale, Ark., Clarence Dwight Haynes, 25, of Siloam Springs, Ark., and Paul William Moore, 23, of Fort Mellon, Canada, overpowered a trusty, stole his gun and escaped in his pickup truck Thursday night.

Woods was serving a life term for murder, Haynes, serving a three-year sentence, and Moore serving a five-year sentence, were both convicted of forgery.

Earlier in the day, Jerry Cullum, 26, of Clinton, Ark., Clarence Thompson, 22, of Fort Smith, Ark., and Billy Wayne Patton, 22 of Armore, Okla., borrowed a truck from another trusty and drove away from the prison.

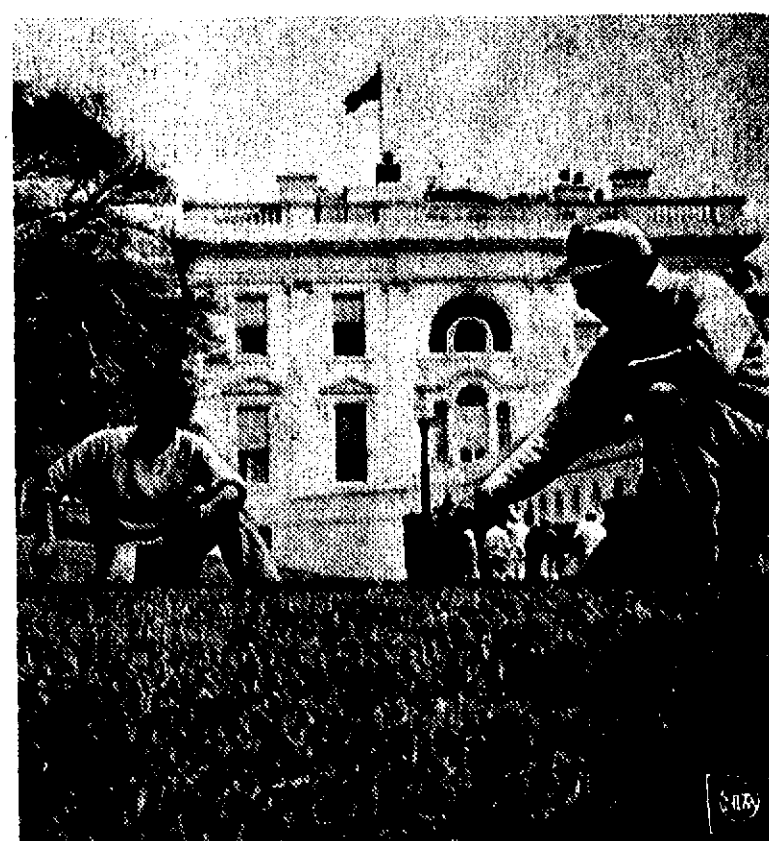

Cullum was serving a seven-year sentence for burglary, Thompson four years for grand larceny and Patton 15 years for burglary.

State Police said Marion Odell Morrow, 23, who walked off a Tucker work detail Tuesday, surrendered peacefully when officers cornered him.

Fire Destroys Hickerson Home

The home of Mrs. Lillian Hickerson was destroyed by fire last night on the Blevins Highway near Hope. Mrs. Hickerson's car was also destroyed. She is in a Texarkana hospital recovering from an operation and nobody was home at the time of the blaze about 10 p.m. Hope firemen went to the scene and managed to save one small outbuilding.

Dr. J. W. Branch reports that lightning killed one of his finest horses last night. There were no other immediate reports of damage during the electrical-rainstorm which dumped an estimate two inches on this area.

BEAUTIFICATION IS ONE THING, but isn't painting the White House lawn grass with a brush carrying things a bit far? Might be, but unseen from this view are the manhole covers these two workmen are actually sprucing up. The executive mansion in the background is also slated for a few touch-ups.

Purcell Says He Saved $18,000

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An attorney general's opinion that invalidated a farm management contract at Tucker Prison Farm saved Arkansas taxpayers about $18,000, Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell said Thursday.

The opinion, issued by Purcell's office at the request of the 1967 General Assembly, dealt with a contract between the state Penitentiary Board and the Jacob Hartz Seed Co., Inc., of Stuttgart, which was to manage the rice and soybean crops at Tucker.

Purcell said Thursday that the opinion held that the contract was invalid because "the board does not have the authority to make such a contract" and because of "certain inequitable and illegal provisions of this particular contract."

The attorney general denied that the opinion held that the operation of the farm in jeopardy or had cast doubt on the validity of all contracts signed by the board.

"While the Penitentiary Board does not have the general authority to make contracts, it has authority, granted by the legislature, to make specific contracts, and the legality of these particular contracts has never been questioned," Purcell said.

The board hired Norvell Adams, a former Hartz employee, to take charge of the crops included in the Hartz contract.

"Since Mr. Adams was hired as a salaried employee, the state will save about $18,000 that would have gone to the Hertz company under the invalidated contract," Purcell said.

Losses Heavy in Neutral Zone Fight

BULLETIN
DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — U.S. Air Force pilots shot down two Communist MIG-21 interceptors today in a dogfight, 29 miles northwest of Hanoi, an Air Force spokesman said. This brought to 66 the number of MIGs U.S. pilots have downed over North Vietnam. Two F-4C Phantom fighter-bombers from the 368th Tactical Fighter Wing at Da Nang downed the MIGs with air to air missiles while escorting F-105 Thunderchiefs on a bombing raid near Hanoi.

SAIGON (AP)—Some 10,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese troops in the demilitarized zone came under heavy Communist pressure today and military headquarters reported near record one-day U.S. plane losses over North Vietnam.

The allied forces had formed a line along the Ben Hai River, which divides North from South Vietnam in the middle of the zone. U.S. Marines were under intense mortar and artillery fire and South Vietnamese troops on their left flank were engaged in fierce jungle fighting.

The allied troops have reported killing 232 Communist troops. U.S. Marines have lost 36 dead and 290 wounded and a South Vietnamese spokesman said government troops took light casualties.

Johnson May Run If Mr. Faubus Does

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — None of the applicants for a job as executive secretary of the Arkansas Democratic party has the endorsement of Jim Johnson, including Johnson's, friend's, according to a confidential memorandum to members of the party's state committee.

"A number of these people have been so closely identified with me that their appointment or selection would immediately raise the question of whether their loyalty was to Jim Johnson or to the Arkansas Democratic party," Johnson said in his memo.

By the same token, the job shouldn't go to a member of the "Bill Smith-Orval Faubus-Lyndon Johnson faction," the memo said.

To see that it doesn't, Johnson told The Associated Press in an interview, he is obtaining proxy votes that he or his friends will be able to cast when the committee selects an applicant Tuesday.

A similar memorandum, which also fell into the hands of the press, helped block the appointment of George Jernigan Jr. at a committee meeting April 25.

The screening committee that recommended Jernigan was later enlarged and is expected to submit five names at Tuesday's meetings. It reportedly has received some 30 applications.

Johnson touched on several other subjects in his memo, including the possibility that he might never seek another public office.

"There is one fairly sure way to cause me to be a candidate," he added, "and that would be for Orval Faubus to announce for a statewide office. As I feel now, the temptation to oppose him would be too great for me to resist."

Johnson, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee in 1966, has blamed the former governor for his defeat at the hands of Republican Winthrop Rockefeller. Faubus, now living at Huntsville, has been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor or the U. S. Senate next year.

Someday it will become apparent that Rockefeller's margin of victory was "purchased by dollars and deceit," Johnson said.

The former associate justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court also had harsh words for those who talk about the demoralization of the Democratic party, including newspapers.

Edwards Acquitted at Prescott

Prescott — A Nevada County Circuit Court Jury acquitted Billy Fonnle Edwards, 39, of Prescott, of a murder charge by reason of insanity Thursday.

The jury reported once that it was deadlocked but returned the innocent verdict on reconsideration.

Edwards was accused of shooting Barham Cox, 34, of near Prescott, on December 7, while he was operating a grader on the Prescott streets.

Nguyen Cao Ky

Nguyen Van Thieu

Phan Khac Suu

Tran Van Huong

Duong Van Minh

Politicking has come alive in South Vietnam, with the approach of elections promised in the nation's new constitution. Potential candidates for president include the following, pictured below: Current Premier Nguyen Cao Ky; Chief of State Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu; Phan Khac Suu, chairman of the constitutional assembly; and Tran Van Huong, who served five months as prime minister and still retains wide popularity and support. Not pictured is Ha Thuc Ky, leader of a clandestine, middle-class party, who has already declared his candidacy. Undeclared, but popular in many Vietnamese circles is Gen. Duong Van Minh (Big Minh), who was chief of state for a while in 1963 and 1964 before being ousted.
